“I want to dance, Kate. It’s the Festival of Lughnasa. I’m only thirty-five. I want to dance.” — DANCING AT LUGHNASA

This is an Irish masterpiece written by Brian Friel in the 30s. Five unforgettable women try to eke out an existence - no tears without laughter- no laughter without tears. Each woman is filled with a passion but deal with it in their own way - except when they are all equally possessed by the spirit of the dance. Dancing with Lughnasa has won Olivier and Tony awards for Best Play.
